Solus: is a short dance film that questions the striving for perfection, uniformity and streamlining.

People: In People, the dancers experiment with a movement based take on people's urge for knowing and predict the future. The performance investigates how people unconsciously want to assign meaning to random behavior, and how we read coincidences in the present as a pattern for the future

Zemiata investigates the significance of being a part of a ritual in today's society and interprets the social and emotional aspects evolving in a group of people, who shares the same faith and the same beliefs.
