Oftentimes we do not notice silence for anything. But when you sink into it, the world comes alive in a new way, and every little sound gets value. It becomes clearer, what is important. In the performance we all have headphones on. You are drawn into a rich universe of sounds. That, you hear, plays together with the performers' movements on stage. They whisper directly into your ear. In this way the performance is created by the images you create inside. Together we create simple physical movements, while we experience the world's sounds resting in the embrace of silence.
