

SAME SHIT, DIFFERENT PLANET

Martian Toothache

The year is 2,251. Humans have successfully colonised Mars. However, an unknown microbe is playing havoc with peoples' teeth causing them to decay exponentially, leading to slow, painful demise. Is it something to do with the addictive drug Omegrin that Earth supplies freely to subdue the Martian colonists? Can the fake dentist Sørensen unearth the Underground movement?

The hastily assembled dental surgery and waiting room become a cauldron of tension and subterfuge. Can humans learn to trust other humans when they do not share the same history, identity or heritage?
